MISSISSIPPI FLOOD.

A General Inundation Probable.

A Railroad Train Wrecked by a Landslide.

NEW ORLEANS, March 14.—The Govrnment gauge, at 7:30 A. M., read 16.6 feet, a fall of four-tenths from the highest point reached yesterday afternoon. The streets are free of overflow water along the water front, except at St. Peter's street, where the flow will soon be stopped. It rained slowly all night, and is drizzling this Cairo and Helena were about four eet above the extreme floods in past years, and the prospects are very decided at even these places. The greatest flood ever known will continue during the next seven days.

At Vicksburg the river is half ar inch below the great flood of 1882. There is a very high stage of water in the lower Arkansas rivers, and it is Vicksburg, unless, indeed, the whole country should be flooded.

Warnings which have been given by the signal officers for several days, that all stock and other movable property in the lower Mississipppi Valley should be removed to localities above the extreme flood level, are reiterated.

WASHINGTON, March 14.-The rainstorm of the past four days in the lower Mississippi Valley has practically ended. There are no encour aging prospects for any portion of the lower Mississippi Valley. The stage at New Orleans is now three-tenths above the highest ever known, and last night touched six-tenths above.
The river has fallen slightly at Cairo, but sharp rises at St. Louis and particularly at Cincinnati, Louisville and Nashville, make it evident that the ecession at Cairo is only temporary, and that thence southward the river must continue at its present high stage for at least a week.

country between the Arkansas line THE GAZETTE has the finest as and Vicksburg on both sides of the river is in imminent danger of inundation. The Arkansas levees have been abandoned. The water is running over the Arkansas levee in several laces. This means that the Tensas basin in Louisiana will be inundated.
All efforts are being concentrated to save the levees in Louisiana between RUPTURE AND PILES. those on the Mississippi shore between Vicksburg and Greensville. If the Louisiana levee goes under Mississippi may be safe, and vice versa. On each side of the river most heroid xertions have been made for weeks and are now being redoubled. Rain as fallen in torrents everywhere. At all endangered points the work is kept up. Livestock and all movables are being taken to places of safety. The protection levee at Mayersville, Miss., gave way yesterday afternoon and the river came against the new levee, which is considered unsafe. A punic eized the people and many ladies and children were sent to Vicksburg by teamer. Two hundred miles of levees are endangered and a general overflow is considered inevitable. By a majority of experienced persons no fear is apprehended of a loss of life, but the estruction of property will be great. NEW ORLEANS, March 14,—A northeast storm prevails and the river went lown to 1616 feet, but is again swelling, and the water is now running over Bienville, Conti and St. Peters streets, but the overflow is not enough to cause much inconvenience.

A Defeated Ministry Resigns.

By Cable and Associated Press.

PARIS, March 14.—The adverse ac tion in the Senate yesterday on Prim Minister Tirard's demand for the adoption of an order of the day when the matter of a commercial treaty with Turkey was brought up has caused the downfall of the entire Ministry.

An interpellation was submitted at yesterday's sitting regarding the treaty, and in response to this Thard moved the adoption of the order of the day. The Senate, by a majority of 78, re fused to adopt the motion. Tirard then tendered his resignation to the President, but the latter persuaded him to remain in office until after Easter. A Cabinet meeting was held to-day, at which Tirard reconsidered his determination to remain, and, after the meeting was over, he tendered resignations of all the members of the Cabinet. De Freycinet will probably form a new Ministry.

President Carnot held a consultation with Floquet this afternoon, and it is believed in some quarters that this evening Floquet will be asked to form a Cabinet.

ARKANSAS CITY (Kan.), March 14 .-The reception of the news of the passage through the House of Representatives of the bill extending a Territorial Government over the Cherokee strip, ogether with the Oklahoma Territorial bill, was received here by the Cherokee boomers with great joy.

This morning a rush was made for the slip by 1,000 or more families congregated between here and the Indian Territory line.

Intense excitement prevails among he boomers, and they are determine to stake out claims regardless of the opposition of the military.

CALDWELL (Kan.), March 14.—Eight hundred families of Cherokee boomers nave decided to move into the strip on terday. According to the provisions of Sunday next. Captain Burbank of the them, but they told him they would go in if they had to fight. Burbank has telegraphed for reinforcements. ARKANSAS CITY, March 14 .- It is reported that a company of U.S. soldiers from Oklahoma City are already in the strip waiting the advance of the omers and that a special train bearing reinforcements from Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, is on the way. The rush of all classes has continued all day, and by sundown 10,000 people will have entered the strip.

EDITION. O'CLOCK

It is rather interesting to observe how both American and English free-traders, when they are ad-dressing American audiences, de-clare that England does not subsidize her merchant marine. This familiar falsehood we find repeated in "London Engineering" of December 20th. That journal declares it to be a misapprehension that the "present position of that British mercantile service is due to State subsidies." "The mistake," it says, "has doubtless arisen from our method of paying for the carriage of mails and for vessels built to suit admiralty requirements." By a very odd coincidence we find in the "London Engineer" of the same date a frank confession that the American theory upon that subject is substantially correct, as all intelligent persons know it to be and as Mr. Blaine in his triumphant answer to Gladstone in the last number of the North American Review conclusively proves it to be.

The London Engineer says: "It has ever been the custom of our Government, when granting subsidies for the establishment of mail steamer lines, to take into consideration objects quite outside of and different from mere postal facilities. It has drawn heavily upon the exchequer with a more imperial intent. And recognizing how important an element it must be towards the defensive strategy of our widely scattered empire that ready means of communication should always be available and the desirability of extending the provision of vast and powerful steamers, capable of receiving armament and of being employed as cruisers in the event of hostili-

WE do not believe, says the Salt Lake Tribune, that half the precautions are taken to prevent accidents or to save the lives of men, in the mines of Great Britain and the continent, that are in the western States and Territories in this country. We do not believe the mines are half as well ventilated, or precautions are half as numerous to enable men to escape, in case the main shaft becomes disabled. There are a great many explosions in European mines that could not take place if the mines were thoroughly ventilated, and when an accident comes there is always an appalling loss of life reported. We believe the best mining machinery, and the best system of working mines in the world was practiced upon until perfected on the Comstock lode; that more advances have been made in such machinery and fittings, here in the West, in thirty years, than were made in three hundred previous years in the Old World.

ONE thing is clear. The men of the Southern States cherish their heroes and statesmen in life and pay honors to them when dead, which the men of the North neglect towards their grand public servants. A monument is about to be raised to the great Confederste Captain, and still the remains of General Grant have no stone raised over them, though the city in the soil of which he sleeps possesses more available wealth than all the South does. It is not at all to the credit of the North that this should be so. The Salt Lake Tribune thinks a popular subscription to a fund for a monument to General Grant to be erected in Ohio, where he was born; in Illinois, where he lived; or in Washington, where he was President, would, if started, be gladly re-sponded to by the people. In dol-lar subscriptions half a million ought to be raised in a single

WHILE the House is considering the bill to recognize our artillery regiment it might also do something toward supplying them with modern guns. Our army is so small that what there is of it should be armed and equipped with what is latest and best. The United States leads the world in the invention and manufacture of small arms, yet the American infantry-man carries an antiquated

THE VALUE OF TIME. In Some Cases It Can Hardly Be Esti

In these days of high-pressure busi-ess methods the element of time is an ness methods the element of time is an exceedingly important consideration. The events of commercial and social life crowd upon each other so rapidly that the average man of affairs is compelled to practice a severe economy in the disposal of the hours and minutes. It is astonishing how much work can be accomplished in a few moments when the mind has been disciplined to act promptly and the business in hand is thoroughly systematized. The telegraph, telephone and stenographer are simply an extra expense to the person who can not utilize them to conserve his time. The managers of great enterprises and the controllers of large investments are usually much sought after in the social the controllers of large investments are usually much sought after in the social and political world. They are compelled to parcel out every working moment with almost miserly exactners. The value of time to them can scarcely be estimated in money. Not that such men deny themselves a sensible amount of rest and recreation. They know these are essential. these are essential.

Perhaps the worst evil the preoccu-pied business man has to contend against is the idle and aimless lounger who haunts the pathways of commerce and steals more valuable time than procras-tination ever did. All sorts of expetination ever did. All sorts of expedients are resorted to in the effort to avoid the depredations of this nuisance. He enters your office and engages you in conversation about every thing in general and nothing in particular, while the precious minutes go gliding by. You feel kindly enough toward all mankind, but the iron enters your soul as you realize that the man is a robber, who is filching a part of your life and pilfering the golden moments as they pass. In all probability you suddenly round up the conversation with a piece of biting sarcasm that rids you of the tormentor, but makes of him an enemy for

In large industrial establishments In large industrial establishments where a great number of men are employed the introduction of all timesaving appliances is absolutely essential. A very little waste of time per capita, when multiplied by the total number of employes, amounts to enough, in many cases, to absorb the entire profits of a close business. For this reason nearly all extensive mill operators son nearly all extensive mill operators enforce some system of keeping the time of the employes. One thousand men five minutes late each morning for a week would be the equivalent of fifty men idle for ten hours; and supposing they are paid at the rate of $2.50 per day, there would be a loss of $125. A Massachusetts mill owner who employs several thousand people recently calculated that it cost him about an hundred dollars whenever a brass band passed his works. While the piece-price plan which is in force in nearly all shoe factories tends to prevent loss from lack of punctuality, it can not entirely do-so because during the absence of the work-people a valuable power plant and thousands of dollars' worth of ma-

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

-A pair of bellows to blow the dust out of the corners makes sweeping of stairs easy.

-Dip dishes in hot water and wipe, rather than to stand them on a dusty stove shelf or black stove, and afterwards soil the tablecloth with them.

—Baked Apples.—Wash the apples, wipe dry and remove the cores; fill the holes with sugar, add a little spice, put half a cupful of hot water in the pan and bake the apples until tender; serve with spenge cake.—Boston Herald.

—Spare your hands as well as your temper by inverting the top of the fruit jar for a minute or two in hot water before attempting to remove it. Canned fruit should always be opened two or three hours before it is needed as the flavor is much finer when the oxygen is fully restored.

-White merino underclothing, when past wearing, makes excellent washrags and cleaning cloths, and nothing makes better holders for either ironing or use about the stove than cast off washed when soiled.

—Ability to use up "scraps" or "leftovers" will add greatly to the attractions of a breakfast-table. Any bits of cold meat, fowl or game can be finely minced, and, if the quantity is small,
half the bulk of bread crumbs, cold boiled rice or minced boiled potatoes
may be added and a little of some gravy to moisten it. Serve it on toast or surrounded with tiny points of toast, or little cakes of mashed potatoes fried in drippings, or with poached or fried eggs.
—Demorest,

drippings, or with peached or fried eggs.

—Bread and raising pudding.—Cut some thin slices of stale bread and butter. Arrange them in layers in a buttered pudding dish with a sprinkling of raisins, stoned and chopped, between each layer, and cover all with a custard made in the proportions of four eggs and a small cup of sugar to a quart of milk. Flavor with lemon and bake in a well-heated oven until the custard is set and the top delicately browned.—Rural New Yorker.

They are in our midst, and also a more welcome sign of spring is growing grass and plants in the open-spaces among the sage bushes on the plains. That mosquitoes have come to stay with us a season, I can most readily prove by a host of reputable ladies and gentlemen, and that blue birds, robins, linnets, ducks, geese and other feathered harbingers of spring are here and have been with us for the past two weeks. This fact does not seem to be known to many, and I have been inquired of on all sides "Where are the blue birds?"

One sweet little girl came up to me and in the artless manner of little children, asked: "General Irish, where are the black birds you promised us?"

where are the black birds you promised us?"

This was when the last storm was at its hight, and the poor birds were hovering in the tops of the leafless trees, trying to get some comfort, and to shelter themselves from the severe wind which came howling down from luckless California and shaking as if in desperation the bare boughs, trying to dislodge the feathered songsters.

The Truckee Republican is enraged at my weather reports. Howling down from its frosty, snow-ladened bolt in the Sierras, that storms come to the winter-ridden Truckeeites when I foretell of brighter skies and safter weather coming here. I have not attempted to foretell the weather and its changes for frosty, storm-worn California. The people who live in the heights and depths of that storm-ladened section of the Arctic regions which is all water on one side and all snow on the other must take care of their own weather. We want none of it in ours. I am talking for Merry Nevada, the State which has always a silver lining to its clouds.

Furthermore I would like to ask the Truckee Republican what satisfaction the Californians can have in the affliction which they are continually giving our scientists by sending over here

LOTTERY SHARKS,

The Elko Independent recently contained the following: Some of our State papers are metaphorically rending their garments because some others oppose a lottery in Nevada. The Independent is opposed to the licensing of any gambling enterprise, from a church fair to a lottery. We have too many licensed games already, and instead of authorizing more the law licensing any game of chance should be repealed. But some of our exchanges seem to advocate the theory that because one evil is tolerated none should be prohibited, provided there's money in it. If money is your chieft. be repealed. But some of our ex-changes seem to advocate the theory that because one evil is tolerated none should be prohibited, provided there's money in it. If money is your object, earntemen, why not license houses of gentlemen, why not license houses of prostitution, assignation houses, or any other device for making money, provided the proprietors will pay a good price for the privilege of conduct-ing the same?

McKISSICK'S OPERA HOUSE.

The Attraction Next Thursday

Evening. James O'Neill, in Fechter's adaptation of Dumas' story of "Monte Cristo," is the attraction at McKissick's Open House next week. Both the play and the actor are well-known, but theater-goers are this year prombut theater-goers are this year promised an excellent supporting company, new scenery painted expressly for the play by D. W. Hughes, and costumes and accessories befitting a proper representation. In the dual character of Edmond Dantes and the Count of Monte Cristo Mr. O'Neil has always kept his hearers in rapt attention as the outspoken sailor boy, afterwards the miserable prisoner of eighteen years, and then as the cool and determined possessor of the treasure of Monte Cristo, with vengeance his only aim. The sale of seats assures a profitable engagement.

Piewing. The Winnemucca Silver State of the 13th inst. says:

The cold weather, which has prevailed this week, has lowered the river materially.

There was a big washout near Ter race, on the Salt Lake Division, yesterday, and passengers, mails and baggage had to be transferred across it. This caused a delay of several hours, and the west-bound train did not arrive before midnight last night.

Farmers on the Big Meadows have ables farmers to get in their crops early. Should the weather keep favorably for a week or ten days at least 150 tons of wheat and barley will be sown. Much of the ground was plowed last year and the year before that, and, as it produced no crop in consequence of the drought, is in a fine condition this year. About 20 tons of alfalfa seed will be sown this season and probably 250 tons of grain. One merchant at Lovelock, S. R. Young, has sold 100 tons of wheat and barley for seed.

A WOMAN SOLDIER,

Who is Certainly Entitled to a Pension.

A singular case is reported among It is the case of a woman whose name have learned from experience. Few served through the war as a man under the name of Sumner. Before the war she lived in Richmond, Va. Her two brothers, famed St. Clair, enlisted in a Virginia regiment. She went to Washington, donned male attire and enlisted in an Ohio regiment. She was in many skirmishes, and finally became a member of one of Sheridan's scouting parties. She was wounded and taken to a hospital, where her identity was discovered. Upon getting out of the hospital she went back to her command, and was wounded twice afterward. If such a loyal soldier as she was is not entitled to a pension, who is?

A SINGULAR GROWTH.

The Thread and Needle Tree

On the plains of New Mexico are forests of a growth known as thread and needle trees. The tree partakes of the nature of the gigantic asparagus, and has large, thick, fleshy leaves, resembling one of the cactus family, known as the "prickly pear." The "needles" of the needle and thread tree are set along the edges of these thick leaves.

thick leaves.

In order to get equipped for sewing, it is only necessary to push the thorn or "needle" gently backward into its fleshy sheath, to loosen it from the tough outside covering of the leaf, and then pull it from the socket. A hundred fine fibers adhere to the thorn like spider webs. By twisting the "needle" during the drawing operation this fiber can be drawin out to an almost indefinite length. The action of the atmosphere toughens these minute threads amazingly to such a degree as to make a thread twisted from it not larger than a common No. 40, capable of sustaining a weight of five pounds, about three times the five pounds, about three times the tensil strength of common "six-cord" thread. The scientific name of this forest wonder is tentyana mucadica.

MY LOVE SEWED ON.

My love sewed on and she stitched my heart
Into each gleaming fold;
She sat where the sun shone on her hair,
Changing its brown to gold,
And still she sewed with sigh and smile,
Making her wedding dress the while.

My love sewed on and she stitched my heart Into each tiny seam; Red lips, white brow and happy eyes Were vatled in the tender dream, And still as she sewed she sang and smiled, Making a robe for a little child.

My love sewed on, and her tears fell fast
On the gathers her needle pressed—
I hay near by in a cold, white sleep,
With my hands crossed on my breast—

LEGENDS OF IOWA.

Origination and Character of Western Folk-Lore.

The "Lone Tree "—Opening of Rock to Conceal a Girl Pursued by Savages— Saved by a Thunder-Bolt—Suicide of Indian Lovers.

Legends will originate wherever mer and women may happen to congregate. It is, however, somewhat startling to learn that legends exist a countless numbers among the people of the Western States. Portions of Illinois and lows, which fifty years ago were a wil-derness or a prairie waste, to-day teem with romantic stories, and scores of objects with which are connected strange adventures or incidents are pointed out to the traveler who has the fortune of coming across one of those most indis-pensable members of Western society,

It has been said that legends reflect the character of a people, and if such is the case, the early Western settlers must have been sturdy men who saw good in every thing, and opposed all strictly vulgar superstition; for the great majority of their legendary stories contain morals and poetic inspirations of the highest order. They are free from the dross of superstition found in the tales of England, Germany and France; they do not breathe the roman-tic but misleading spirit of occultness which pervades the fables of the Orient; nor do they in any way resemble the weird, uninspired sagas of the Norse peasantry.

The legends of the Westare as sturdy, as independent and as forcible as the men who created them, and for this reason, if no other, deserve more than passing mention. What could, for instance, be more poetic than the story of the "Lone Tree," which was related to the writer not long ago by one of the oldest settlers of Eastern Iowa? The tale-or, to speak more properly, the legend—is based on an oak tree, for many years the only one standing within a radius of eight or nine miles. How did the tree come there? That the unsophisticated pioneers could not explain; so they resorted to invention, and gave currency to a story which will live long after they have been forgotten. Early in the year 1840, so the report goes, soon after the so-called Blackhawk Purchase had been consummated, a young couple emigrated from New York State to the West. The man (Bill Brewster was his name) was openhearted, hospitable and courageous, and his wife was a representative American woman of the middle class, industrious, kind and faithful. After their arrival in lows the two young people, went out "prospecting" (looking for suitable land) every day, and finally reached a tract of fat prairie land which promised to yield rich crops. Here they decided to take up their abode, and the woman, relieved of all anxiety and worry, then and there gave birth to a son, and at the same moment—to ling sprang up which was ever after-ward called the "Lone Tree." The sapling, in course of time, became a stout oak tree, and stood for many years in its isolated position, a mystery to the uninitiated, an object of never-ceasing curiosity to the old settlers, and a monument of interest to the student of American life and manners, until a vandal cut it down, four or five years ago.

Scarcely less interesting is a bit of legendary talk current in the region of the Wyoming Hills (a chain of moundlike elevations located on the western shore of the Mississippi river, between the towns of Davenport and Muscatine, la.). These hills were once upon a time the meeting-place of thousands of In-dians, and hundreds of their dead were buried in gigantic mounds constructed on the crests of the elevations. When the white settlers first appeared they received a cold welcome from the red men who wandered through the country which was once their own, but had been ceded to the United States Government by their chiefs. The savages carried vengeance in their hearts and murder in their eyes; and many a told agricultur-ist, who had braved the hardships of other version of the adventure here re-corded is not quite as romantic. In it the love-lorn brave and his devoted girl are described as a very ordinary white couple who ended a life of disappointpioneer life to acquire some land for his family, never returned from his cornfield, and the wailing and lamentations heid, and the wailing and lamentations of widowed women and fatherless children were echoed from one farm to the other almost every week. One of these men went out one Sunday morning to collect his cattle. He ascended one of the sloping hills, not noticing the form of an Indian who was concealed among the tall weeds growing on the summit. ment by drowning themselves. This matter-of-fact account of the tragedy may be the true one, but the rising generation is inclined to put faith in the Indian tradition, which, as has already been stated, originated not with the red men, but with the early white settlers. To repeat stories like the foregoing without the least attempt at embellishment may detract from their literary merit; but the object of the writer has been to prove that the American people waters of the Mississippi. His wife, growing anxious about his welfare, at noon sent out her little laughter to hasten her father's return. The child, inured to danger, undertook the task, but had not proceeded far when she noticed a red man on the hill, and, turning around, one behind her. Escape seemed impossible; but just at hat moment a crevice large enough to conceal her opened in the side of the hill. She sought the refuge thus providentially offered, and as soon as she concealed herself the opening closed, and to her startled sight was revealed a cavern of large dimensions, of which she was the only occupant. Not until the following evening did the crevice open again. The girl, almost famished by this time, cropt out of her hiding-place, and, seeing that all danger was past, ran home, where she related her strange story to a number of neighbors who had met at the cabin to solve the

Another and scarcely less interesting instance of providential interference with the affairs of men has many be-its confluence with the Iowa river. In Horse thieves in those days expected no mercy when they had the misfortune to fall into the hands of the settlers; and when one bright June morning in the year 1840 nine of them were caught

by a detachment of outraged farmers, they prepared themselves to meet death with bold faces. The gang was con-ducted to a huge oak tree on the banks of the Cedar river, whose nine branches

invited the settlers to finish their work of vengeance. One man after the other was supplied with a hempen neck-tie, and arrangements were made to send them to kingdom come at the same instant. The signal was given. A flerce stroke of lightning and a deafening roar of thunder followed the command which was to end the earthly existence of nine human beings. Eight bodies dangled in the air. The ninth was lying on the ground, saved by the lightning which had ripped the branch on which he was hanging from the trunk of the tree. It was a miracle, for the man, after recovering from his stupor, proved his innocence to the sacisfaction of the "vigilants." The eight thieves had met their fate, but Providence interfered in a way that could not be mis

here related has become a treasured leg-

A fourth legend had its origin in the early days as Bloomington, Ia. This town is built on many hills which overlook the Mississippi river. In the days preceding the settlement of Iowa by whites, the vicinity of Muscatine is said to have been the favorite resort for Indian lovers, who passed many hours on the noble bluffs thinking of the maid-ens they adored. In most cases this harmless pastime had no serious results,

but once upon a time an Indian warrior fell in love with the beautiful daughter of a mighty chief. His tender feelings were reciprocated by the copper-colored charmer, but her father would not listen to the pleadings of the obscure lover.

There was no war at the time, and consequently the ambitious brave had m opportunity to distinguish himself, and win the apple of his eye by deeds of bravery, which seems to have been the only way in which the stern parent might have been moved. Elopement was out of question, as the country was inhabited by faithful followers of their sufferings the couple concluded to end their existence. As soon as the lovers had formed this desperate resolution they made their way toward the river, where they found a canoe. Chanting a death song and exchanging sentiments of undying love, they floated down the river until they came to the bluffs already referred to. Here they dis-embarked, ascended one of the steep hills, and, embracing each other, threw themselves into the quiet river below. The incident was indus-triously discussed by the few white families then living in that neighborhood, who forthwith named the once picturesque bluff "Lover's Leap." An-

A Sweet Voice is One of the Most Excel-lent Things in a Woman.

I know some houses, well built and handsomely furnished, where it is not pleasant to be even a visitor. Sharp, so miraculously saved, but it would, nevertheless, be a dangerous thing to doubt the veracity of this tale in the presence of the few survivors of those stirring times; and popular taste has applied to the hill, which will sooner or later be made famous by this angry tones resound through th morning to night, and the influence is as contagious as measles, and much more to be dreaded in a household. The sooner or later be made famous by this story, the not very euphonic but very significant name of "Providence Hole." This pretty piece of fiction, the writer is constrained to add, has a prototype in a German story, but it is doubtful whether the people who repeated it on the banks of the Mississippi fifty years children catch it, and it lasts for life, an incurable disease. A friend has such a neighbor within hearing of her house, when doors and windows are open, and even Poll Parrot has caught the tune and delights in screaming and scolding, until she has been sent into ago were aware of the existence of the Teutonic fable. It is safe to claim the story of Providence Hole as a purely the country to improve her habits. Children catch cross tones quicker than parrots. When mother sets the example, you will scarcely hear a pleasant word among the children in their plays with each other. Yet the discipline of such a family is always weak and irreg ular. The children expect so much scolding before they do any thing they are bid; while in many a home, where the low, firm tone of the mother, or a decided look of her steady eye, is law, they never think of disobedience, either in or out of her sight. territory was inhabited by a wild, desperate class of people, who lived on what they could steal from more indus-

Oh, mothers, it is worth a great deal to cultivate that "excellent thing in a woman," a low, sweet voice. If you are ever so much tired by the mischievous or wilful pranks of the little ones, speak low. It will be a great help to you to even try to be patient and cheerful, if you can not wholly succeed. Anger makes you wretched, and your children also. Impatient, angry tones never did the heart good, but plenty of evil. You can not have the excuse for them that they lighten your burdens; they only make them ten times heavier. For your own sake, as well as your children's sake, learn to speak low. They will remember that tone when your h under the willows. So, too, would they remember a harsh and angry voice. Which legacy will you leave to your children?—Kindergarten Magazine.

HANDEL IN A RAGE.

The Peculiar Way in Which the Maestro Persons have been known to appreciate that indescribable mixture of sound produced by the preparatory tuning of an orchestra with the organ even more than the performance itself. Handel was not of this opinion. After he was once at his desk, woe betide the be-lated fiddle that scraped a fifth, or the inexperienced flute that attempted the least "tootle."

It was a grand night at the opera The Prince of Wales had arrived in good time, remembering how Handel had been annoved sometimes at his coming in late. The instruments, supposed to be in perfect tune, were lying ready, and the performers entered. Alas! a wag had crept in before them and put every one of the stringed instruments out of tune!

Handel entered; all the bows were raised together, and at the given beat they all started off con spirito. The effect must have been as if every one of the performers had been musically tumbling down-stairs. The unbapt maestro rushed wildly from his plackicked to pieces the first double bas that opposed him, and seizing a kettledrum hurled it violently at the leader of the band. The effort sent his fullbottomed wig flying, but he did not heed it; and rushing bareheaded to the footlights, he stood for a few moments amid the roars of the house, snorting with rage and choked with passion. The Prince, although highly amused, soon thought this kind of entertainment had lasted long enough, and going down in person he besought Handel to be calm, and with much difficulty prevailed on him to resume his wig and his baton.—

N. Y. Ledger. We were joined at table by a foreign gentleman with high cheek-bones, yel-low face and slanting eyes, and dressed in the latest European fashion with high collar, four-in-hand scarf and pointed shoes. He was very courteous, and managed what little English he knew as skilfully as he dresses. And he gave me a touch of the far East in the story of his being here; for he is under a cloud, an amiable exile whose return to his native land might involve his being boiled in oil, or other ingeni-ous form of death. For well as he fig-ured at luncheon with us, I hear that he has been obliged to leave because of his having poisoned too many of his guests one day at table—former enemies of his—and because of his having dispatched with the sword those whose digestion had resisted his efforts at conciliation. However this may be, his extradition is demanded, to which he obects, and invokes Western ideas of civilization, and protests that his excesses have been merely political.—John La Farge, in Century.

THE NEW OPERATOR. He Is Still Looking for the Coal That Never Came. "I remember when I was down in Las Vegas some years ago," said an old-time telegrapher to a Minneapolis Journal reporter, "the office was short a pressreport man. One day an operator, whose clothes had seen better days, drifted in and inquired if he could find work. 'What kind of a job do you want?' asked the chief. 'Are you a report man?' 'Yes, sir,' replied the new-comer, confi-dently. He was seated at the press wire, and, taking a knife from his pocket, leisurely began to sharpen a pencil, the while listening to the instrument as it clicked off the items. The operators it clicked off the items. The operators in the room began to wonder why the 'fast man' did not begin to copy, and when he asked a check boy where the water-cooler was, and had taken a drink from it, they thought the new report-operator was a 'good one,' and was trying to make a record. By this time the sender at the other end of the wire was sender at the other end of the wire was sender at the other end of the wire was probably fifty to seventy-five words shead, and while they knew that no operator in the world could copy that far behind thought they must have found a telegraphic phenomenon. Then the would-be press man asked where the coal-box was, picked up the scuttle and went outside. After waiting a few minutes the chief, who by this time concluded that the operator was a fraud, cluded that the operator was a fraud, stopped the sender. The new operator never returned, and it is supposed he is still looking for the coal that never had lost her sheep and couldn't tell where to find them." So the old nursery rhyme says, and it goes on to bid her "Leave them alone and they'll come home and bring their tails behind them." All this may be true of lost sheep, but if you have lost your health you cannot afford to leave that alone. It will not come back of its own accord. Some people brag that they never bother about colds. They "let them go the way they came." Alas! too often the victims go—to a consumptive's grave. Until very recently a cure for Consumption, which is universally acknowledged to be scrotula affecting the lungs, would have been looked upon as miraculous, but now people are beginning to realize that the disease is not incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it if taken in time and given a fair trial. This world-renowned remedy will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy state when other medns have failed. It is the most potent tonic, or strength restorer, alterntive, or blood—cleanser, and nutritive, or flesh builder known to medical science. For Lingering Coughs, Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, "Liver Complaint" and Dyspepsia or Indigestion, it is an unequaled remedy.
